

Alexandros Lambrovassilis

Alexandros entered the arts studying percussion in the Athens Conservatory and had been an active/professional performer for almost ten years, (1996-2006).

As a photographer, Alexandros started practicing the art at an early age, mainly focusing in landscape and urban architecture. Through the years of practice the photographer has established a deep understanding and thus a strong personal language when dealing with the forms that constitute our living environment.

Since 2002 Lamprovasilis has been working as a professional published photographer through assignments from various publications and organizations. In 2006 he moves to USA in order to pursue influences and knowledge. He resides in New York City.

Working on assignments from several publications he has portrayed personalities such as:

Mike Dukakis, Tommy Hilfiger, John Varvatos, Victor Navasky, George Lois, Sir Micheal Lewellyn Smith, Arrigo Cipriani, Joe Locke, Sergio Salvatore, Dr. Lonnie Smith, Paul Szilard and others.

As he comments on his work:

"While in an attempt to describe a person's character/temperament - capturing the relation the individual forms with the surrounding context and its properties - the human element appears, every now and then embedded in the forms of our environment".

Essentially, the photographer uses light as the catalyst to blend the duality of figure and space into a "Dramatic" - Theatrical image".
